Italian Strikers Taken to Helper

They Number One Hundred and Sixteen and Answer Court on Serious Charge.

Special to The Tribune.

PRICE, Utah, April 27.—The 116 Italian strikers were taken to Helper this morning to appear before Justice M. A. Ward, to answer to blanket charge of resisting an officer of the law in performing his duty, by refusing to give up prisoners who es-caped from the Price jail, rioting, intimidating men and driving them from work in the Helper yards, hold-up of M. P. Braffet and other charges are against various members of the mob from Strike Town. The Helper school house was secured for use as a court-

Attorneys for the strikers waived reading of the complaint against their clients and pleaded not guilty in each case. Beginning with tomorrow, one case will be called each day until all of the 116 are disposed of.

Sylvester Tedesco, in whose case a separate charge was made of rioling, intimidation with firearms, breaking quarantine regulations, etc., will have his trial when the other 116 cases are disposed of. He gave $1000 bond today and is at liberty. Caesar Antonio's case with the company to the property of the company to the company of the comp which is similar will come up tomorrow. His bond was fixed at $1000 but was not furnished. If held, his trial will follow

The first trial of the 116 will be the case against Rosano Scavo, to be tried tomorrow before Justice Ward on the general charge, after him, John Mila-

Joe Earbogilio, the Helper salcon-keeper, was released under $500 bond. His hearing will come toward the last.
The 116 Italians are back at Price tonight under guard in the implement shed and all seem satisfied. In fact, they say it is a picnic.

James Harrison, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, is here tonight and the other members the Board are expected tonight, and they will convene tomorrow.

Early Times in the West.

Early Times in the West.

In his reminiscences Henry Villard tells of Horace Greeley's visit to Colorado. He and a companion went in one of the express stages and had met with a singular and perilous accident. In driving through a herd of buffalces the animals, probably maddened at the sight of the red color of the coach, had attacked and upset it Greeley had received a severe cut below his right knee, crippling him for several weeks. Being confined to his room in the hotel by his wounds Greeley was greatly disturbed by the sound of reveiry by night that rose unceasingly from the barroom Villard writes. His wrath culminated on the third night of his tortures. I was fortunate enough to be with him, and thus became an eye and car witness of what happened. About 10 o'clock he got up and insisted on limping to the barroom. His appearance, though his presence in the building was generally known, created surprise and instant stience. He begged for a chair, and, Friends, said he, I have been in pain and without sleep for almost a week and I am well-nigh worn out. Now I am a guest of this hotel, I have been in pain and without sleep for almost a week and I is am well-nigh worn out. Now I am a guest of this hotel, I have been in pain and without sleep for any board and lodging and I am entitled to rest during the might but how can I get it with all this inches going on in this place? Then he adoressed one of the most pathetic appeals I ever heard to those around him to abandon their vicious ways and become sober and industrious. He spoke for nearly an hour and was listened to with rapt interest and the most pathetic appeals I ever heard to those around him to abandon their vicious ways and become sober and industrious. He spoke for nearly an hour and was listened to with rapt interest and the most pathetic appeals I ever heard to those around him to abandon their vicious ways and become sober and industrious. He spoke for nearly an hour and was listened to with rapt interest and the most pathetic appeals I ever heard to rapt interest and the most perfect respect He succeeded too, in his object, gambling stopped and the bar was closed every night at 11 o clock as long as he re-mained."

During this period of his life Villard got During this period of his life Villard got a glimpse of Western judicial machinery and gives this vivid picture of a term of court being held during a very hot spell in June. 'The Judge presided without his coat and with unbottoned shirt thrown wide open. He sat thus disarrayed, tipped back in his arm chair, with ms legs on the desk before him. The attorneys naturally followed his example and made themselves as cool as possible. One marked incident has remained fixed in my mind. While one of the mest lequacious attorneys was making a flery argument he was interrupted by the Judge, who called out to him. Jim, you had better keep cool in this hot weather and give me a bite of your tobacco.' The pleader stoppid, pulled out his plug and carried it to the Judge, who took a hasty bite, whereupon the proceedings were resumed.'

whereupon the proceedings were resumed."

Of his own arrival in Colorado Villard writes: "We brought a mail of several hundred letters and newspapers, the announcement of which fact drew three cheers for the express company. It was a great boon, the last news from the Missouri river being nearly five weeks old. Of course, I was the center of attraction and overwhelmed with questions. Some one proposed that I should tell the news from the States to them all and I was made to mount a log and entertain the audience for half an hour with what had happened during the four weeks before my departure, for which I got a vote of thanks and which secured me at once the good will of all the settlers."

St. Vincent Today.

It is not yet two years since Mount Pelce blew off its head and La Soufriere in St. Vincent followed suit. Yet it is aimost forgotten. A correspondent of the London Times writes that nature has already made great progress toward hiding the scars left by the fearful eventure. There is yet by the fearful eruptions. There is yet by the learni evered with unassimilated glassy ash, painful to the eye and burn-ing to the feet, but wherever the ash has mixed with the soil it has had a fertilizing effect, and such spots are fertilizing effect, and such spots are covered with a most luxuriant growth of grass. One of the most noticeable results of the eruption is the comparative absence of insect life. No lizards are seen, the fireflies are scarce, and butterflies still scarcer, while the beautiful humming birds have almost entirely disappeared. La Soufriere seems tirely disappeared. La Soufriere seems to have quieted down for another long rest. The lake in the bosom of the crater is filling, which is regarded as a very good sign. The last time the volcano muttered was in March, a year ago. Its sides are still black and sourced, but in the crayless of the rooks. ago. Its sides are still black and scarred, but in the crevices of the rocks up to a height of 1000 feet the writer saw growing silver fern, guinea grass, sweet potatoes and cassava, all self-grown. Given five years of undisturbed natural processes, he sees no reason why the north side of St. Vincent should not be as cultivable, fertile and habitable as it was for the half century preceding the cruptions of May, 1902. Such is the bountifulness of nature in the tropics—New York Globe,
